Del. Pollard re-elected
Challengers win school board seats; Gellich, Russell unseats incumbents
by Reid Armstrong

AT THE POLLS—Democrat Del Pollard, who defeated Republican Karen J. Doyle for re-election to the Lancaster County School Board, was declared winner in the District 4 race.

"It was a hard-fought campaign," Pollard said.

The campaign was marked by a lack of public issue debates. Instead, the candidates ran largely on personality, character and record.

"I think the results are a validation of the issues that were discussed," Pollard said.

However, the campaign did not focus on the school system's financial problems, which have plagued the board for years.

"I think the public is tired of hearing about our financial problems," Pollard said.

The school board is facing a $5 million budget deficit this year and has been forced to cut programs and services. The board has also been criticized for its handling of the budget crisis.

"I think the public is tired of hearing about our financial problems," Pollard said.

The school board is facing a $5 million budget deficit this year and has been forced to cut programs and services. The board has also been criticized for its handling of the budget crisis.

The campaign did not focus on the school system's financial problems, which have plagued the board for years.

"I think the public is tired of hearing about our financial problems," Pollard said.

The school board is facing a $5 million budget deficit this year and has been forced to cut programs and services. The board has also been criticized for its handling of the budget crisis.

The campaign did not focus on the school system's financial problems, which have plagued the board for years.

"I think the public is tired of hearing about our financial problems," Pollard said.

The school board is facing a $5 million budget deficit this year and has been forced to cut programs and services. The board has also been criticized for its handling of the budget crisis.

"I think the public is tired of hearing about our financial problems," Pollard said.

The school board is facing a $5 million budget deficit this year and has been forced to cut programs and services. The board has also been criticized for its handling of the budget crisis.